MURDERED BY THE PIG
DECEMBER 4, 1969

We know that with all the bullshit out there, you can come to consider yourself on the mountain top. I may even consider myself one day on the mountain top. I may have already. But I know that in the valley there are people like Benny and there are people like me, people like Mickey White and people like Huey P. Newton and Bobby Seale. And that below the valley are people like Bobby Hutton, people like Eldridge Cleaver. We know that going into the valley is a dangerous thing. We know that when you go out to the valley you got to make a commitment.

A lot of people think the revolution is bullshit, but it's not. A lot of us think that when you get in the revolution you can talk your way out of things, but that's not true. Ask Bobby Hutton, ask Huey Newton, ask Eldridge Cleaver, Mickey White, and Dennis Mora. Ask these people whether it's a game. If you get yourself involved in a revolutionary struggle, then you've got to be serious.
It's all over but the fighting

"Amerikan justice is like Amerikan money; once you stop believing in it, all hell breaks loose."
Conspiracy

It was a different trial when Bobby Seale was there. A trial that spoke clearly to the racism of the Nation: One black man tried in an Conspiracy charges for giving a sermon in Lincoln Park. The State's continuing attempt to criminalize the Black Panther Party to jail—several men who rose to describe the struggle as a whole. The image of Bobby Seale, seated in the courtroom, was not only something out of theToolkit of the 60s, but something as well out of the very contemporary slavery/bipartisanship that defines our society. The scene in the courtroom was an image that evoked the whole history of American racism and black rebellion.

But not the past in trial in Chicago's Federal Building. While there are still some elements of the present within it (Bayley's militancy, Anil's "footsteps Down Street"), the trial is most of all anachronistic—a morality play out of the history of the 60s, when some of us still believed the State could be changed by words and songs and marches—by anything short of the gun. It is a trial of the innocence of the white peace movement—an innocence which died with the Detroit riots, with Tet, with Columbia, with the tear gas explosions of the Democratic Convention itself. The morning in the courtroom—3/4 full with movement celebrities, Chicago red squad piles, a few hippies—outlook was already beginning to get White Panther John Sinclair out of jail to testify at the trial. John is housed inside a Michigan prison for possession of some grass. He'll be there for 31/2 years. So the Conspiracy 7 was trying to get him a couple of days off.

The motion was denied by Magistrate Hoffman as everybody knew it would. Then the festivities began. "He's critical to the defense," Jerry Rubin mumbled angrily—and a bit too fast—to lawyer Bill Kunstler. "Who said that?" Rootmouth moans.

"My name is David T. Dellinger and I said that, and what's more..." Dellinger is on his feet giving a speech about "What Bobby Seale meant when he called this place a fascist court." The audience reverts Dellinger and shushes him down, while Rootmouth moans and Ronnie Davis moans:

"You gonna say all of us, too, Judge?"
"Who said that?"
"Harry..."　

"Let me record that the remarks have been made by Defendant Davis." Rootmouth is now getting furious.

"Are you gonna let the prosecution carry out our defense, too, Judge?" This time it's Abbie on his feet: "Who said that?"

"I did. My name is Abbie. I don't have a last name. I just lit it!"

And that's how it goes. Little plays within a play. Outbursts now and then, song missions, serenades. The defense will open its case soon, and efforts to prove that the demonstrations and Festival of Life were planned to be peaceful. Rapier describes it: "During the 1960s the American government was on trial for crimes against the people of this country and the people of the world. And we now find the government guilty, and condemned to death in the streets."

The trial that should have happened two years ago will go on for several more months, in the balance is the next ten years of seven people's lives. But it is the last trial of its kind, it has been and will continue to be war from here on in, all the way home.

Palestine, the Arabs

with powerful backing from its American-European home base, British reaction was highly restrained. Eventually the "getStatus quo" formula emerged: in the "legal status quo" of Jerusalem and already pointed to the military offensives. The Arab states entered the Arab-Israeli war in June 1967 to prevent Israeli annexation of all Palestine, and in the last-minute swerve, US-led, the Arab-Israeli war in June 1967. by ZIONISM and Zionism

by Tabitha Petran

second of two parts

Zionists had made to achieve its aims one constant theme had to be the reduction of Arab forces into Arab areas. By 1948, the British decision to maintain the British Mandate in Palestine, and to evacuate their forces from successive areas as stages were cleared, permitted the Zionists to exert Arab population and secure strategic points within the Arab Base areas behind the lines of British authority, which prevented any interference from regular Arab armies. The Zionist offensive was facilitated by the fact that the British handed over more and more Jewish areas not envisaged in Arab areas where they imposed Arab defense preparations and did nothing to stop Zionist attacks on the Arabs.

Plan C. The first phase of the Zionist strategy, involved 1) putting constant pressure everywhere against the Palestinian Arabs (attacks on villages and terrorist attacks on Arab quarters in the cities), and 2) maintaining contact with the Jewish settlements outside the Jewish State area. Palmsch Commander Yigal Allon explained that his contact was necessary for the coming offensive to unite these settlements. Plan D, the second phase, was an all-out offensive to conquer and hold territory in the wake of the withdrawing British forces. Quot 1948 defined Plan D's purpose as "control of the area given penetration of our forces into Arab areas." If it wasn't for the Arab invasion, there would have been no step to the expansion of the forces of Haganah, which could have, with the same drive, reached the natural borders of Western Israel." (see emphasis)

On May 11, 1948, the Haganah were indeed on their way to complete military dominance of Palestine, and had expelled 300,000 Palestinian Arabs. Zionist propaganda maintains that the Arabs left on orders of their leaders, although in 1948 it said nothing whatever about these alleged orders and has never produced a single piece of prima facie evidence. Eriehm Children's study of the records of the BBC—which mentioned all Middle East broadcasts throughout 1948—and Professor Waldell's study of the Arab press and Arab radio broadcasts during this period, have completely refuted this Zionist claim. Children found not even one appeal or order from any Arab leader calling on the people to leave, but many appeals, even flat statements, to the civilians of Palestine to stay put. Zionist sources themselves, moreover, describe the terrorist and psychological warfare used to expel the Palestinians. Of the effect of the massacre of Arab Taifs, April 9-called by Yippele "comparable to the crimes committed by the Nazis against the Jews"—Menahim Begin boasted: "Of the about 800,000 Arabs who lived in the present territory of Israel, only some 156,000 are still there. The political and economic significance of this development can hardly be overestimated."

Palmsch Commander Allon described the tactics he used before May 15 "to clean the inner Galilee": "If gathered all the Jewish saboteurs, who have been met with Arabs in different villages, and asked them to whom they were welcomed in the area of some Arabs that a great Jewish reinforcement had arrived in Galilee and that it was going to burn all of the villages of Huleh. They should suggest to the Arabs, as their friends, to escape while they were still time. The tactic reached its goal completely. The wide areas were cleaned." against political risks.

In the period mid-1969 to April 1971, Israel was condemned by the UN for more than 30 military attacks on the village of Deir Yassin. These attacks resulted in the deaths of 108 Palestinians, and in total 400 Palestinian civilians were killed. The attacks were carried out by Israeli forces, who had taken the land and the property and the justice is rightly and rightfully that of the Arabs. Most of the Arab refugees have been seeking refuge in areas that are occupied by the Israelis, and they have been supported by the UN and other international organizations.

Israel's policy of placing all responsibility for the refugees on the Arab states is designed to hide its own complicity in the crimes against these people and to confuse the real issues: the Palestine refugees, in particular, are not a refugee problem, but a refugee crisis. This is a crisis that has been exacerbated by the occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Israel's aggression is not only a military attack on the Palestinians, but also a humiliation of their culture and identity, which is why the United Nations has condemned it.

The JUNE 1967 WAR

The Israeli military operation in the Sinai Peninsula was part of a broader strategy to secure control of the Suez Canal. The operation was supported by the United States and the United Kingdom, and was seen as a way to gain control of the Canal and to counter Egyptian advances in the region.

Israel's aggression in the Sinai Peninsula was not just a military operation, but also a calculated move to gain control of the Suez Canal and its resources. This operation was part of a broader strategy to secure control of the Canal and to counter Egyptian advances in the region.

Do you think that you would believe the police officer over how I might describe what happened?

Q. In other words, you think that he would consider the description of events that he supposed to happen here believable when said by the police officer and as told by me?

A. Absolutely.

Q. You don't think there is anything in your opinions, your differences of opinion with me that would keep you from being impartial in judging the facts?

A. No, sir.

Q. You understood that the fact that he is a police officer doesn't necessarily mean that he is telling the truth, but that he was not in a position that he might be mistaken?

A. I agree with that.

MR. CAVELLIN: OKAY, thank you, Mr. Hansen.

MR. HANSON: Thank you, your honor.

MR. WOZBETZ: Your honor.

You work at international harvester, how old are you?

A. 29.

Q. One in the fall, one is two, and one is one and a half.

A. That's correct.

Q. Have you worked at this national office for a long time?

A. Almost seven years.

Q. Do you like your work?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know that during that period of October 1 there were activities?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you agree with the activity during that time?

A. Well, actually, we were not protected we didn't cross any activity. All we saw were policemen. They formed a large group.

Q. Did that prevent you from leaving the building?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever leave the building during the time that people were outside?

A. CHAMBERLAIN: Objection. Your Honor.

MR. HANSON: On that point.

MR. CAVELLIN: You know who Mark Sales is, Mr. Hansen?

A. JURD: Yes.

Q. Did you ever leave the building during the time that people were outside?

A. CHAMBERLAIN: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. CAVELLIN: What were those last names, Mr. Hansen?

A. JURD: Hansen.

Q. Did you ever leave the building during the time that people were outside?

A. CHAMBERLAIN: Objection. Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. CAVELLIN: I am glad of that you think. Go ahead.

Q. But it's a very important thing to do, isn't it?

MR. CAVELLIN: But it's extremely important to publish whether or not prospective jurors were involved in this demonstration.

Q. Court?

THE COURT: I am glad of that you think. Go ahead.

Q. Did you understand it to be?

A. Well, protest against the company, and also against the Viet Nam War?

Q. Do you want to see the pirts next.

A. CHAMBERLAIN: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. CAVELLIN: I think that's a logical question, Your Honor.

THE COURT: No, it isn't. Ask him about his qualifications.

MR. CAVELLIN: Do you understand what the meaning of the plant means to the other people who work in the shop?

A. CHAMBERLAIN: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. CAVELLIN: Despite the fact that it would mean the loss of many jobs to black workers, you would not support that demonstration?

A. CHAMBERLAIN: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. CAVELLIN: Is it fair, in your opinion, to ask people to make the same sacrifices that you are making?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you understand it to be?

Q. Is it fair, in your opinion, to ask people to make the same sacrifices that you are making?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, that you are doing it for your own personal benefit, rather than for the company as a whole?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you understand it to be?

A. CHAMBERLAIN: Objection. Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. CAVELLIN: I think it is important to establish with his opinion on this discrimination, which was, in fact, part of the consolidated states.

THE COURT: I am going to ask the Court to admonish the defendant in asking these questions.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. CAVELLIN: I think that's a logical question, Your Honor.

THE COURT: No, it isn't. Ask him about his qualifications.

Comrades,

"The monster is belching and choking on its own oppressive spurtum! I wish everyone could have seen how real that M.F.piq representative of jurisprudence was when he blew his cool! The steam and stench just burst out from under them black curtains behind which are hidden the last-decaying remnants of the 'white ivory tower.' Big Jim is on the high tier. Who wouldn't be, under the circumstances?! Those rooms of decorum and hypocrisy are now punctuated with shrieks of Kim and ever-bl and En said with true fervor. Oh! the sounds need to be made louder and more incessant, but with more skill by the consciousness until they become a deafening roar! I was in the bullpen with a hip y.c. pacifist drudge - a knave to be accused of throwing a blade at a pig (he missed), a Jehovah's Witness up for 3-5 on draft refusal. He suggested I read his little blue book. What a quaint little work to do - it's abit limited up here, sorry tours, anyway party on the 17th, food to the people.

Don
"CALL ME MR. PARADISE"

On November 17, 26 Boston Weather people were hauled on charges of conspiracy to murder. Earlier in the day the pigs had hunted down and beaten a 16-year-old friend of Jimmy Paradise, who had been running with us and digging our politics and our colleagues. Jimmy allegedly gave the main information linking Boston Weatherman with a sniper attack on the Cambridge pig station.

The hearing began when pig Judge Vola called for the State to present its case calling up Jimmy Paradise. Jimmy had been held in "protective" custody for two weeks, alternately beaten and bribed. Next to the witness stand stood a down pig whose fists and clubs Jimmy had been in touch with during the previous 13 days. The DA started questioning Jimmy. With the strength of the revolution in front of him in the packed courtroom, and the collective hold on with得分or on him, he came through. Pointing his finger at the DA, he told the grown-up to "Call me Mister Paradise, not this Jimmy stuff," and to speak to the female defendants as "women, not girls." He began cross-examining the DA: " Didn't you tell me last night I'd be one sorry kid if I didn't play ball with you?" 20 pigs* jaws hit the floor, and Jimmy went on when the piglet DA signed the affidavit: he was waving in the air: "Of course I did, under force. Those four pigs right there had just beaten me. That big one—could you please identify yourself?"—He put them up to it. He put a ten on the table after they hit me," Pig Scarcro—the MTF, PAT ONE—showed his head to distract and tried to smile nervously but the revolution had him squirming. Judge Vola called a recess, but afterward Mr. Paradise went right on, right over those pigs—screaming their cases wide open. Our lawyers moved again to suppress the State's evidence, since the warrant and the whole case was obviously such a framewrap and because Jimmy had been beaten and denied counsel. The judge, getting desperate, called it off until Saturday morning.

Although most charges were dropped (one attempted murder charge remains), Jimmy will be in jail for some time for robbing juvenile probation. Many people have been inspired by Jimmy's dynamite strength, and brought close to Weatherman.

THE YOUTH WILL MAKE THE REVOLUTION,
THROUGHOUT AMERICA AND THE WORLD.
BE STRONG!
BE BEAUTIFUL!
